

Write about a time when you realised you were wrong, admitted your mistake, and learnt an important lesson from it.

It was a typical Tuesday morning. When I entered the class some ~~and~~ ^{and having their own tiny} students were laughing ~~and~~ ^{were} conversation, while others going around ~~to~~ ^{er} the class to greet one another. Overlapping conversation something that I had grown used to every day filled the room. Then I spotted my best friend, Mary. I went to her and greeted her with a pleasant smile. ~~we~~ ^{we} best friends from kindergarten, he would always hang out in my ~~room~~ ^{house} every ~~friend~~ ^{fr} ~~fr~~ ^{we} day after school. I would also share ~~very~~ ^{our} secrets with one another ^{er} as well. Just then the teacher walked in. Instantly everyone went back to their seat. The moment was quick but natural; something that happened everyday with not much thought in it. So Mary and I settled in our seats, ready to start the lesson.

Then my teacher, Ms Tan ~~assigned~~ ^{on} us some work ~~to~~ ^{find} to do. Moment after I started doing my assignment, I heard something that ~~was~~ ~~was~~ caught my attention. I heard a bunch of ~~and~~ ^{and} from the table beside me talking about ~~the~~ something very personal about me. It was also one of the secrets that I only told Mary and not a single soul in the class. 'how do they know? how much do they know? how ^{much} ~~more~~ would they know? and most importantly ~~to~~ how would have told them?' All these such thought filled my mind.

Just then a thought that I ^{thought} ~~would~~ ^I never ~~think~~ of popped in my brain. 'what if Mary told them?' I thought. I was speechless. For the whole lesson I was think how ^{will} ~~would~~ Mary possible betray me like that. After a while the recess bell rang. ~~Upon hearing that~~ the students ^{run} ~~rushed~~ to hand in the paper and bolted ~~to~~ down to the school canteen wanting to ~~beat~~ the ^{long} ~~at~~ line out the stairs. As I ~~made~~ made my way slowly down to the canteen ~~was~~ still in ~~the~~ disbelief of what happen in class ~~after~~ after.

When I reached the canteen I spotted Mary.

Write about a time when you realised you were wrong, admitted your mistake, and learnt an important lesson from it.

without hesitation I stomped towards her as I was raging with anger. "Why would you do such a thing! I trusted you to ~~keep~~ ~~my~~ keep my secrete and you go around ^{telling} people about it!" I shouted. She was looking so lost in my word and looked she had absolutely no idea ^h what I was talking which made me even frustrated. "oh stop pretending like you do not know what I am talking about." I ~~shouted~~ ^{raised} my voice once more. Before she could say a word I angrily walk away.

~~for~~ ^{for} the whole day I avoided her, ~~a~~ not wanting to see her. when she kept coming up to me to explain herself, ~~but~~ I kept going away from her. Later the ~~then~~ teacher parented us together so I had no choice but to talk to her. Then she asked if she could explain herself one more time. I said "fine" in a surr voice while crossing my arms. Mary said that she would never tell anyone my ~~secre~~ secrete as she knew how much it meant to me, and that ~~at~~ ~~a~~ other might just over hear us talking. At that ~~second~~ ^a second ~~with~~ wave of embarrassment washed over me. I apologised sincerely to her for accusing her unfairly and for refusing to let her explain the ~~attitude~~ ~~set~~ problem. Although she was hurt by my action, she eventually forgave me.

The experience taught me that ~~trust~~ trust can easily be damaged with assumptions and ~~impulsive~~ impulsive actions. From that day onwards I learned that I should not assume something that I do not know fully about and I also learned to stay calm and communicate properly ~~with~~ before jumping to conclusion.